INTRODUCTION

The housing "system" in Massachusetts is made up of many parts and many people in the private sector and all levels of government. Unfortunately, there is no "one-stop-shopping" to find all the answers to everyone's questions about housing.

The purpose of this handbook is to provide enough basic information to answer the following questions.

- What housing assistance is available for low and moderate income residents?
- Who is eligible for it?
- Where is it located?
- Who should be contacted for information?

This handbook is put together so that you can find the section which addresses your situation. The last section of this handbook lists the names, addresses and phone numbers of resources to contact for housing assistance.

If you have access to the Internet this publication can be found at the Department of Housing and Community Development's web site: www.state.ma.us/dhcd under the publications menu or you can call DHCD, Housing Division directly: 617-727-7130.

To receive a "Housing List" of privately-owned, subsidized housing developments, you can contact the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency at (617) 854-1000. The Boston Fair Housing Commission, Room 966, City Hall publishes METROLIST. This is a listing of public, subsidized and private housing available in the metropolitan Boston area. You can reach them by calling (617) 635-4408.

PERMANENT HOUSING RESOURCES

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts subsidizes thousands of housing units through a variety of programs. These units are available for renters within certain income limits. They can be found in new apartment complexes, rehabilitated buildings such as row houses, townhouses, garden apartments, or even converted buildings such as former schools or warehouses. Some of these developments may have only a certain percentage of the units subsidized. Some are available only for elderly or handicapped households; others are not restricted in this way.

There are developments which are publicly owned; that is, they are controlled by a local housing authority, such as the Boston Housing Authority, Worcester Housing Authority, Springfield Housing Authority, and authorities in smaller towns such as Medway, Rockport and Wareham. There are developments which are owned by private housing developers but are publicly subsidized and therefore available to low income persons.

WHAT IS PUBLIC HOUSING?

Public Housing is owned and managed by the approximately 258 local housing authorities and 4 regional housing authorities in Massachusetts. Not every community in the state has a local housing authority or is served by a regional housing authority. Most of the larger cities and towns do have housing authorities, however. The housing authorities are public agencies, governed by state and/or federal laws. The members of the authority's Board of Commissioners is elected or appointed by the city or town. they are separate from local city or town government.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE FOR PUBLIC HOUSING?

Housing authorities operate several different programs for families, elderly and residents with disabilities. If you have a disability, you may also find units with accessible features in either a family or elderly-oriented development. You must be at least 62 years of age or handicapped to be eligible for state funded elderly housing.

There are developments that have a mixture of all types of households. Many of the smaller authorities have only one type of housing, so you have to call to find out if they have the type of development you are seeking.

There are maximum income limits for different size households wishing to apply for public housing. These income limits are set separately by the federal and state governments for their respective developments and will vary slightly.

Income limits change over time and vary for different areas in the state, so you have to ask about these limits at the housing authority, or authorities, where you might be interested in living. For example, in 1996 for state-funded public housing in the Boston area, a single person household could have an income up to $29,100; and a four person household could have an income up to $41,600. Larger households, of course, could have higher incomes.

Families and individuals who qualify for public housing pay a rent which is up to 30% of their adjusted income.

Persons whose annual income exceed the limits established by either federal or state regulation are not eligible for public housing. Likewise, persons who have a consistently poor record of meeting their rent payments, or who have a history of disturbing people, destroying property or involvement in illegal activities may not be housed by the local public housing authority.

WHERE CAN I APPLY FOR PUBLIC HOUSING?

You should contact your local or regional authority to find out where they take applications. You can fill out an application for more than one authority, depending on where you would like to live or how immediate your housing need is. First, you should call several authorities to see what might be available and how long you would be on their waiting lists. Then you should go to those authorities where you have your best chance and fill out an application, even though the location of the housing may not be your first choice. Applications are also available by mail.

Once you have turned in your application you will be placed on the authority's waiting list in chronological order (according to the submission date of your completed application). Every housing authority has a tenant selection plan which provides priority categories to determine the order applicants are offered housing. At the time you apply, you should be sure to inform the authority of any special circumstances you or your family may face so that you may be placed as soon as possible.

In certain housing authorities you will be given a preference if you choose to be housed in a program where your race is substantially under-represented.

Since the waiting lists vary in length at each authority, you should inquire about the approximate waiting time when you apply. It is VERY IMPORTANT to keep the authority informed about any changes in address or status while you are on the waiting list, so that they can send you notices, and contact you from time to time about mailing list updates, changes in program regulations, etc. They must know how to contact you when your name reaches the top of the list. At that time, the authority will contact you in writing.

You can ask to be placed on the waiting list for every program of the authority for which you are eligible and qualified, which will minimize the waiting time for a unit to be offered and help you make the choice about where you want to live.

IN WHAT ORDER ARE TENANTS SELECTED FROM HOUSING AUTHORITY LISTS?

DHCD has Tenant Selection Regulations for public housing effective as of October, 1986. These prescribe the way housing authorities are required to select tenants for state funded housing. The following are particularly significant:

Tenants are to be selected in chronological order, on a first come, first served basis, within priority and preference categories, such as for families or individuals who are victims of fire, floods, or natural disasters.

The regulations contain provisions for emergency access for homeless individuals and families, in certain circumstances, to state-funded housing.

- The regulations establish affirmative action requirements for those communities in which minorities are currently under-represented in the housing authority's state-funded housing programs. The regulations require those housing authorities to establish affirmative action placement rates for minority applicants.
- The regulations provide preference for veterans for admission to Chapter 200 Veterans Housing or for Chapter 705 Family Housing when no Chapter 200 housing exists in the particular community.
- The regulations allow preference for local residents of a given community. This does not affect local preference being given provided that the housing authority provides access to minority families in accordance with its affirmative action goal.

For more detailed information on these regulations you should contact your local housing authority.

A list of all authorities administering public housing programs in Massachusetts is provided in this handbook starting on page 11.

WHAT TYPE OF HOUSING IS AVAILABLE FOR PEOPLE WITH SPECIAL NEEDS?

Most LHAs have some units in their elderly developments that were built to conform with Architectural Access Board standards of accessibility. LHAs also have some units in family housing with limited accessibility features. Be sure to note on your application whether you require certain design features in a unit.

People with physical or mental disabilities are eligible for special housing programs as long as the eligibility requirements established in the regulations are met. Applicants with disabilities are then placed on the Elderly- Handicapped waiting list. State housing programs for the disabled are referred to as Chapter 689. Units may also be available in Chapter 667 and Chapter 705 developments.

WHAT OTHER TYPES OF SUBSIDIZED HOUSING ARE THERE?

In addition to public housing, there are other types of subsidized housing developments. These housing complexes are owned and managed by private companies around the state. Some developments may have subsidies attached to only a certain percentage of their units, others may have all their units subsidized.

Like public housing developments, these apartment complexes can be large or small, built on one site or scattered on different sites. They serve families, the elderly and/or handicapped residents.

These various housing developments have no one particular name. They may be financed through the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, the Farmers Home Administration (in rural areas), or through a private bank or a community development agency. A list of properties that include some of these programs can be obtained by calling the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency at (617) 854-1000.

You should also check your local, regional and community newspapers for apartments for rent or for SRO/single rooms for rent.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE FOR THIS HOUSING?

There are maximum income limits according to family size, which govern these subsidy programs. These income limits vary by the type of program and they may or may not be the same limits that apply to public housing. You may be eligible for one program, but not another. In general, the income limits of these programs are very similar to public housing. You should contact the management office of the development to receive more information. The list available from MHFA will provide the names of subsidized developments and designate whether they are family, elderly or mixed units, their locations, and the management agent's telephone numbers.

WHAT OTHER HOUSING ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS ARE AVAILABLE?

There are some rental assistance subsidies which are not attached to a specific unit or development. Eligible applicants are issued a rent certificate or voucher and then they must locate their own apartment in the private rental market.

WHAT IS RENTAL ASSISTANCE?

The most widely used rental assistance program is the Section 8 Existing Program which is funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). In this program, you pay no more than 30% of your adjusted gross monthly income for rent, and the Section 8 subsidy pays the difference between that amount and the full rent for the apartment. The total housing costs cannot be higher than the maximum rent limits set by HUD, called Fair Market Rents (FMRs), for the size of the apartment. In addition to the rent limits, the apartment must meet basic housing quality standards and pass inspection by housing agency inspectors.

Another form of rental assistance funded by HUD is the Section 8 Voucher Program. The difference between certificates and vouchers is that there is no maximum rent set by HUD on the Voucher Program; the tenant may choose to rent any apartment, regardless of how much rent is being charged provided that the rent is reasonable as determined by the housing agency. However, the housing agency determines the subsidy amount the tenant is entitled to receive based on a payment standard established for the family's size. This amount is fixed and the tenant must pay the difference between the subsidy amount and the rent which can be more or less than 30% of the tenant's income.

The Department of Housing and Community Development administers a Section 8 program funded by HUD and a state rental assistance program (formerly the Chapter 707 Program) called the Massachusetts Rental Voucher Program (MRVP) funded by the Massachusetts legislature. The MRVP program is similar to HUD's Section 8 Voucher Program. The subsidy amount is based on geographic location, family income, and the number of bedrooms needed for the household.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE FOR THE SECTION 8 PROGRAM, OR THE MASSACHUSETTS RENTAL VOUCHER PROGRAM?

Like public housing, there are different income limits, determined by your household size and the geographic location of your current residence. Under the Section 8 Program the maximum income in 1996 in the Boston area ranged from $19,800 for a single person household to $28,250 for a family of four and more for larger families. For some parts of the state the maximum income limits are somewhat lower. The income limits for the Massachusetts Rental Voucher Program (MRVP) are the same throughout the state, which in 1996 ranged from $15,480 for a single person household to $31,200 for a family of four. These limits increase for larger families. In most cases the MRVP program provides a flat grant amount towards your rent depending on income and the bedroom size required. With a flat grant subsidy, the tenant must pay the difference between the subsidy amount and the rent charged by the owner. The amount of the MRVP voucher is determined by income categories in increments of $1,500, (i.e. 0-$1499; $1500-1599; $1600-1699, etc.), geographic location and bedroom size.

For the one third of the MRVP Program which is project-based (the subsidies are attached to specific units), the tenant share is either 35% of income if heat is included, or 30% of income if it is not.

There are no new applicants being accepted for the MRVP Mobility Program. In a few cases applications are still accepted for the MRVP project-based components; eligibility is based on the MRVP limits discussed above.

When you receive a rental assistance certificate or voucher you will have 60-120 days in which to locate a suitable apartment. The issuing agency will explain all the procedures to you at the time you receive the assistance. If the subsidy offered you is project-based, you will be offered a specific unit.

You are protected from discrimination by both federal and state fair housing laws. If you suspect that you may have been discriminated against because of race, gender, religion, etc., or because you have children, please inform your housing agency immediately. You may also file a complaint with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD) at (617) 727-3990 and/or the HUD Fair Housing Complaint Hotline at 1-800-424-8590.

WHERE CAN I APPLY?

There are basically two different types of agencies which administer these programs, and you must apply directly to them. You are free to apply to as many agencies as you wish.

Local housing authorities (LHAs) administer these programs in addition to developing their own complexes, which we discussed earlier. There is an LHA in almost every city and large town in the state as well as most of the smaller towns; in some rural areas there are regional housing authorities which serve an entire region rather than a single community. The full list of LHAs is provided in this handbook on pages 11-24.

In addition to the LHAs, DHCD subcontracts with 9 regional non-profit housing agencies to administer programs on its behalf. On the federal Section 8 side, these non-profits are able to provide this form of rental assistance in each of the Commonwealth's 351 cities and towns. For the state rental voucher program, they provide assistance in any community that does not have an LHA to administer the program. In both instances, these regional non-profit agencies ensure that eligible households are able to use federal or state funded programs, thus maximizing the housing options of eligible recipients. The names and addresses of these nine regional non-profit agencies are listed on page 25.

WHERE CAN I USE MY CERTIFICATE OR VOUCHER?

Section 8 certificate from a regional non-profit agency or a local housing authority anywhere in the state.

Section 8 voucher from a regional non-profit agency or local housing authority - anywhere in the United States where a local Section 8 Program is administered.

Massachusetts Rental Voucher from a regional-non profit agency or a local housing authority - you may use MRVP voucher anywhere in the state with one exception. You cannot move into certain sections of another community if the area is part of a federal Census tract where at least 40% of the residents live below the federal poverty level. The thirteen communities where these Census tracts are located include Boston, Grafton, Methuen, Northboro, Holyoke, Pittsfield, Tewksbury, Lawrence, Lowell, Lynn, Springfield, Westboro, Worcester. Voucher holders living in a given city or town can move anywhere within that city or town regardless of the specified Census tracts.

Not every local housing authority or non-profit agency administers all rental assistance programs. You should contact all the LHAs and the appropriate regional non-profit agencies where you would like to live. Local papers will also give you listings of available apartments.

WHAT CAN I FIND IN THE PRIVATE MARKET?

The private rental market in Massachusetts offers a very wide range of choices across the state. The same size apartment in the same condition will have a different rent depending on the community, the neighborhood, and even the street on which it is located. The rent also depends on what the landlord wants to charge, and, in some communities, is allowed to charge.

There are hard choices which have to be made by the lower income household, given the range of situations available to them. Trade-offs have to be made between the rent, the size and condition of the apartment, and the area in which it is located. The harder and longer you look, the better chance you will have finding suitable housing. Housing subsidies are limited, so it is advisable to continue your search even if you are on a waiting list for subsidized housing.

HOW DO I FIND A SUITABLE APARTMENT IN THE PRIVATE MARKET?

There is no single place to look for a suitable apartment. Obviously, low rent apartments in good condition are rarely empty for long and do not need to be advertised in the local newspapers in order to attract potential tenants. Most of these apartments get rented by word of mouth. Therefore, you should ask others, wherever you go, where to look and who else to ask about such housing.

There is usually a neighborhood "network" of people and locations to learn about. For example, bulletin boards often provide rental information and they can be found at laundromats, supermarkets, churches, multi-service centers, senior citizen centers, etc. In short, the more people you talk to about places to look or people to call, the better your chances are for being "at the right place at the right time" when an apartment becomes available.

WHAT AGENCIES OR ORGANIZATIONS CAN ASSIST ME WITH MY SEARCH?

A centralized place to start in any city or town is the City Hall or Town Hall. In very small communities you may only have the Town Clerk or Selectmen's Office to contact for information. In larger communities, there may be a specific housing office which can provide you with some help. This first call can lead you to the names of persons or agencies, such as a Human Service Department or a Council on Aging, or even a Fair Housing Officer. You should ask for these departments by name when you call the main telephone number in the city or town. Otherwise, you should simply ask for the person who handles housing needs in the community.

In addition to local government offices, there are a number of community-based or neighborhood-based organizations which can provide assistance. Such listings are provided in this handbook as follows:

- | | |
|---|---------|
| • Local or Regional Housing Authorities | page 11 |
| • Regional Non-Profit Agencies | page 25 |
| • Neighborhood Housing Services Offices | page 28 |
| • Community Development Corporations | page 29 |
| • Community Action Agencies | page 33 |

The following list offers further suggestions of the types of places to contact:

- churches
- multi-service agencies
- ethnic or religious organizations
- charitable organizations
- local health centers
- women's groups

HOMELESSNESS PREVENTION

ARE YOU HAVING PROBLEMS MAINTAINING YOUR CURRENT HOUSING SITUATION?

The first step you need to take is to contact the local non-profit agency in your community that administers the Homelessness Intercept Program (HIP) (refer to the list on page 45). If you are unable to locate an agency in your area, call the HIP directly at the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) at (617) 727-7765.

Your local HIP provider can help you stabilize your current housing situation and prevent you from losing your housing. The majority of HIP providers have qualified mediators on staff and can help you successfully work out problems you may be having with your landlord. HIP providers can offer you technical assistance to identify and secure benefits for which you are eligible which may also help you maintain your housing.

WHAT IF YOU ARE ALREADY HOMELESS?

If you are a household with children, your first call should be to your Transitional Assistance Office (refer to pages 26-27). The Department of Transitional Assistance (DTA) office will determine if you are eligible for temporary assistance benefits, including temporary emergency shelter.

Your local HIP contractor is also available to you to help obtain housing and will work with you to ensure that you remain housed. Each HIP contractor provides the following services:

Housing Search - HIP providers can assess your family's housing needs, review your eligibility for subsidized housing; provide you with information on locating housing; and explain fair housing laws and practices. HIP providers can also accompany you when necessary if you would like to view apartments or negotiate with landlords.

Stabilization - After you have been placed in a housing unit, the HIP provider will provide twelve months of stabilization services to ensure that your family remains housed. As part of the stabilization services, your HIP provider will refer you to agencies in your community which can provide you with the various support services you may need.
